On a beautiful November day, the Monterey Bay Chapter hosted a Fly-In to Watsonville Airport (KWVI), California. Twelve planes with 34 pilots or passengers (and one dog) representing six 99s chapter from around the state flew in.

After a very social lunch and hangar talk at the airport restaurant the planes were refueled with discounted fuel prices offered by the airport manager, given local souvenirs, and off they flew back to their home airports.

The Ninety-Nines Mission Statement:

"The Ninety-Nines is the international organization of women pilots that promotes advancement of aviation through education, scholarships and mutual support while honoring our unique history and sharing our passion for flight."

Our general meeting for Dec. 18, 2019 cancelled. INSTEAD...@ 6 p.m. in the EAA hangar is the 99s holiday party (60 Aviation Way)

Directions: Traveling CA-1 North take the Airport Blvd/Freedom exit. Merge onto Larkin Valley Road. Turn left onto Airport Blvd. Turn left onto Aviation Way.

Certainly anxious to hear how Lyceum went. I did some pilot recruiting myself on my trip to New England. I was attending a 50th birthday celebration of a childhood friend's daughter. Carrie, is one of the few who can claim to have been born in Yosemite. The love of nature is in her veins for sure as the celebration was in Stowe, VT where Carrie, husband Doug and daughter Lucy have a condo for winter and summer adventures. Naturally there were lots of 'old friends' attending. One college gal, Doug's godchild actually, has been wanting to get her pilots license while she is finishing up her Masters. She is going to school in New York City, but since we have 99 friends everywhere, I will be contacting one who belonged to Monterey Bay when her husband was at the Naval Post graduate school and I know Christine will be welcomed into the fold!! Yea! Joanne

Azellia White - trailblazer for African American women in aviation, dies at 106 (9.15.2019)

(CNN) Azellia White, one of the nation's first African American female pilots, earned her pilot's license just after World War II and found freedom flying in the skies above the Jim Crow South.

"She says you just felt free up there, just free. There weren't any racial barriers or things like that when you're in the skies," her great-niece, Emeldia Bailey, told CNN affiliate KTRK.

White died of "natural causes" September 14, Bailey told CNN. She was 106. Her funeral was held September 21, and she was buried in a cemetery just outside Houston.

Meeting Eleanor Roosevelt inspired her to fly

Though White is regarded as racial pioneer, she flew in the contrails of other African American women who took to the skies.

She was born in June 1913 in Gonzales, Texas, about 75 miles east of San Antonio, and would have been a little girl when America's first black female pilot, Bessie Coleman, earned her wings in 1921, according to the National Women's History Museum.

But in that time of racial prejudice, Coleman had needed to earn her license from France's Fédération Aéronautique Internationale before touring America and Europe giving flight lessons.

White married in 1936 and five years later moved with her husband, Hulon "Pappy" White, to Tuskegee, Alabama, where he would work as an airplane mechanic, according to the Lone Star Flight Museum in Houston.

First lady Eleanor Roosevelt visited Tuskegee in 1941 and an instructor for the famed Tuskegee Airmen training there took her up in the air in a plane for an hour.

Returning to Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt urged her husband, President Franklin Roosevelt, to deploy Tuskegee's black pilots into air combat in World War II.

"Mrs. Roosevelt helped us," White told KTRK last year. "She said, 'I'm going back and tell them to let those black guys fly,' and she did it, and we took over."

She helped start a flight school

After World War II, White and her husband, along with two other Tuskegee Airmen, created the Sky Ranch Flying Service, which was a flight school, delivery service and airport with a mission to serve the black community during segregation.

White earned her pilot's license in 1946 and flew with Tuskegee Airmen who had come home from the war, according to the Lone Star Flight Museum.

Bailey, her great-niece, told CNN she grew up not far from White and "saw her almost every day."

At family gatherings, White regaled relatives with tales of her aerial adventures. "We would sit and listen to all her stories, about places where she'd flown," Bailey said.

Though she herself never got a chance to fly her great-aunt, Bailey recalled White flying her mother from Tuskegee to Birmingham on shopping trips.

In 2018, White was inducted into the Organization of Black Aerospace Professionals Hall of Fame and Texas Aviation Hall of Fame according to the Lone Star Flight Museum.

Following her inductions, White summed up her journey to KTRK: "I just had a good time in life."

CNN's Melissa Alonso contributed to this story. (article found by Jane Parks McKay for Logbook)

Lyceum @ Hartnell College

The event was well attended by students from the Monterey Bay area. We had a very interested audience. Questions were asked and our volunteers were happy to answer any and all questions. There were enough volunteers to engage the students in the many aspects of an aviation career. We were able to procure many different pamphlets and such related to aviation. We also had a fair amount of give away items from various organization. Our volunteers for the event were Jeanne Hendrickson, Mona Kendrick, Michael Serasio, Sue Purvis, Nikki Fryn, Kay Harmon, and Theresa Levandoski-Byers.

We also received a nice comment from the event Coordinator, Hanna Sutterfield. "I wanted to extend my sincere thanks to you and the other female pilots of the Monterey Bay 99s International Organization Of women Pilots. I know the young women at our Expanding Your Horizons events really enjoyed your table."
