Prop Wash

By Claudia Contreras

It's a beautiful crisp clear windless winter day. I'm standing out on the Tarmac watching my student taxi off on her 2nd solo flight. A few weeks ago she had her first solo and the weather turned bad before her 2nd landing. Needless to say it rattled her and me and the other people watching. My first thought was for her safety and her mental wellbeing. The last thing I wanted was for this to cause her to not come back. Being the strong resilient young woman that she is she asked if I'd fly with her before she soloed again. I said yes of course. I admire her, if I got nervous watching while safely on the ground I know it must have been worse for her but she told me on her 2nd lesson that she didn't think she'd enjoy this (flying) as much but now she is thinking of going into a career in aviation.

As a flight instructor I think it's my duty to encourage and motivate others to try flying and get new pilots but I think others in the field should do the same whether it be mechanics, fbo personnel, or just other pilots. Keep that in mind the next time you talk to others about being a pilot.

Pilot's Bill of Rights 2

See the attached article from AOPA PILOT February 2016 magazine on pages 8 and 9. Until the bill passes, here are some helpful tips based on terrible experiences. It is highly recommended that before you go in to see the FAA medical examiner, you go to see all your doctors you are receiving prescription medications from. Get a letter (on their official letterhead) from each doctor stating you are safe to fly with the medications prescribed to you. Once you have those letters (and lab work results), you can make an appointment with the AME to get your medical certificate. Remember to bring all your supporting documents to your appointment. Believe me; this will save you a lot of time, and minimize any stress and anxiety waiting for the doctors' letters, especially when you receive them on the day your AME needs to submit your application to the FAA.

Southwest Section Winter Business Meeting

Four Monterey Bay chapter members attended the SWS Winter Business Meeting on January 24th held at San Carlos Airport, Hiller Museum. The Winter Business Meeting is designed to be a workshop for any and all chapters and members to attend to learn more about the functioning of the organization.

Topics covered at this year's workshop were;

- Updates on electronic voting for future elections and pending by-laws.
- Newsletter tips for Chapters.
- Oral History Project – what is the purpose and how to request oral histories for chapter members.
- Lynn Meadows shared a fundraising activity that their chapter does.
Selling aviation related items on ebay.

All very interesting and well presented.

In addition to the workshops the Hiller Museum was included in the registration cost of the workshop and time was set aside to tour the museum and gift shop. The gift shop was a great opportunity to pick up aviation related toys for our KSBW "Share your Holidays" project.

If you have not attended a Winter Business Meeting ever or not recently add it to your aviation bucket list for next January. Orange County chapter will be the host.

The following information was taken from the AOPA webpage entitled Full Senate Passes Medical Reform (referencing Pilot's Bill of Rights 2)

The full Senate has passed the Pilot's Bill of Rights 2, which will now go to the House for consideration. The Senate passed the bill, which includes third class medical reform, by unanimous consent on Dec. 15 (2015), less than a week after it was reported out by the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation. The House must also pass the bill before it can go to the president for a signature.

The bill must also pass the House, where it has 152 bipartisan cosponsors, before it can go to the president for his signature.

Sen. Jim Inhofe (R-Okla.) introduced the Pilot's Bill of Rights 2 in the Senate in February as a follow up to the original Pilot's Bill of Rights measure he championed that became law in 2012. In addition to medical reform, the Pilot's Bill of Rights 2 includes a number of protections for pilots facing FAA enforcement actions.

Under the medical reforms of the Pilot's Bill of Rights 2, most pilots who have held a valid third class medical, either regular or special issuance, within 10 years of the legislation's enactment would never need to get another FAA medical exam. The rule would apply to pilots flying VFR or IFR in aircraft weighing up to 6,000 pounds and carrying up to five passengers at altitudes below 18,000 feet and speeds up to 250 knots.

Pilots who develop certain medical conditions, including a small list of specific cardiac, mental health, or neurological conditions, will have to get an FAA special issuance medical one time only, significantly reducing the time and money spent navigating the FAA's medical bureaucracy.

For pilots who have not had a valid medical in the past 10 years and those who have never applied for and received a medical certificate, a one-time third class medical certification by an aviation medical examiner will be required. After a pilot has been medically certified once, either through the regular or special-issuance process, he or she will also be able to fly indefinitely without needing to go through the FAA medical certification process again.

After pilots have met these requirements, they will need to visit their personal physician once every four years for a medical exam. Pilots will need to fill out a form and provide it to the doctor performing the exam. The pilot must make a note of the visit and keep the signed form in his or her logbook.

The form will include a short medical history questionnaire as well as a list of items the doctor must include in the examination. Following the exam, both the physician and the pilot must sign the form verifying that the items were examined and discussed.

During deliberations prior to passage of the bill by the full Senate, language was added requiring the physician to certify that he or she is not aware of any medical condition that, as it is currently being treated, would interfere with the ability to fly safely.

Unlike today's third class medical, the new exam and form will not require the doctor to make a "pass/fail" judgment, and no information about the exam needs to be provided to the FAA unless it is specifically requested. The FAA can request additional information from a pilot if it receives credible or urgent information, including information from the National Driver Register or the FAA Safety Hotline, that the pilot may not be able to safely operate an aircraft.

In addition to the medical exam by a personal physician once every four years, pilots will be required to take a free online education course on aeromedical factors every two years. The course will be designed to increase awareness and understanding of medical factors that can affect a pilot's fitness to fly.

Under the bill, the FAA will have a year from the date the legislation becomes law to produce a final rule reflecting the legislation's provisions. If the final rule is not ready within one year of the bill's enactment, pilots will be allowed to fly under the guidelines set out in the legislation without facing FAA enforcement action. The legislation also directs the FAA to streamline the special issuance medical process and identify additional medical conditions that AMEs can issue medical certificates for without requiring the pilot to go through the special issuance medical process.

Welcome, Stephanie Mendelsohn
