Prop Wash By Alice Talnack

On a recent flight I served as co-pilot and passenger. It got me to thinking about our responsibilities as pilots when we are the co-pilot or passenger. Of course, the first responsibility that comes to mind is helping to watch for other aircraft.

Other things that we may want to share with the pilot are:

- How current are you feeling as a pilot?
- Are you flying frequently and staying abreast of all current aviation-related information?
- Or are you only flying occasionally, just keeping the rust off your skills?
- Are you grounded for any reason?

More importantly for us: are we able to pitch in and be a safety pilot if the pilot-in-command needs us to take over?

Any other tips to share with us from your flying/passenger experience?

Alice

Cal-Pacific Airmotive Tour

The Monterey Bay Chapter took their monthly meeting to Salinas Airport on June 15th to view the new display featuring some of our members from the Salinas area. You can see the display in the Airport terminal building. Following the meeting, Lori Atkinson of Cal-Pacific Airmotive provided a fascinating inside look at the P-51 restoration facilities the company operates at Salinas Airport. Well known throughout the warbird community for the quality of their work, the aircraft they have restored have won many awards.
